"Recycling" means some system of persuading the oil countries to lend out their surplus funds.

European officials asserted pri-vately that Mr. Simon's statement is the beginning of a new American approach that will "rec-ognize the facts of life"—the main one being that the oil cartel countries will not lower oil prices.

Mandatory or Voluntary

Mr. Simon conceded to reporters that the only "leverage" that the United States has to bring oil prices down is to accelerate conservation measures and to increase alternate supplies. He said that conservation measures could be either mandatory or voluntary and that President Ford would make the decision "as to whether they should be mandatory."

Of major figures at today's meetings, Mr. Simon was by far slert and ready to act quickly should the situation change unexpectedly." he said.

Mr. Simon's comments were softer than those of Secretary of State Henry Klasinger, who told the United Nations on Sept. 23 that "strains on the fabric and institutions of the world economy threaten to engulf us all in a general depression."

The gloomy mood of the conference more closely matched Mr. Kissinger's. Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, for example, said in his speech that "the responsibility for making sure that the tragedy of the 1930s is not repeated in detail over the next few years rests on us collectively."

The most dismal appraisal came from the delegate of Italy. the industrial country most heavily stricken by the fourfold increase in the price of oil.

Policy Seeks to Regain Occupied Territories Fahmy Links Oil to Mideast Peace By Marilyn Berger UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 1 (WP) Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy told the General Assembly today that the Arabs had used their oil only to secure their "legitimate rights" and only after "warning the countries which assist Israel" in occupying their territories. Mr. Fahmy responded to statements last week by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger concerning what were called the catastrophic consequences of a continued policy by the oil cartel to rig prices at artificially high levels. In doing so, Mr. Fahmy directly linked the supply of Arab oil to the settlement of the Middle East problem.

Mr. Kissinger has sought to break the link between the issues of supply and price of oil on the one hand and the Middle East controversy on the other.

But Mr. Fahmy insisted upon the connection. "This question cannot be tackled on the basis of isolating its political factors from economic considerations, he said.

Mobilize Their Oil

"When the Arabs decided to mobilize their oil to serve the battle that affects their destiny," he added, "they did not in reality and in all fairness manipulate the destinies and fate of peoples. The Arabs cherish nothing but of his trips into the Venezuelan Embassy in Santo love and sympathy for all peoples Domingo, carrying food for terrorists and their hostages. but, when they took their action, they were replying to a rash policy adopted by some statesmen without any consideration for Arab interests. They also used their oil only within the limits that would secure for them their legitimate rights."

Mr. Fahmy said the Arab countries lifted the oil embargo "immediately after the countries against which it was imposedin particular the United States changed their attitude and directed their policy toward contributing to a just and lasting settle-

Mr. Fahmy also answered Mr. Kissinger's argument that the oil prices were rigged at a high level by a political decision and that they could therefore be lowered by political decision

Economic Factors

Mr. Falmy emphasized economic factors. The price of oil, he said, went up only after the prices of other raw materials and manufactured goods had gone up.

Moreover, ha said, the industri-alized countries controlled the prices of their goods through speculations and monopolies regardless of the requirements of the world." Finally, he said, the Arabs were not alone in raising prices but joined with other oil producers.

"The attempt to distort the reputation of Arab countries and defame them will only lead to widening the gap between the parties concerned and this is bound to delay reaching a balanced solution," he said. Last night, the Arab League told Mr. Kissinger that his Middle East achievements to date were insufficient to gain an Arab-Israeli peace and urged him to intensify his efforts.

Psychological Problems Also Are Posed by Mastectomies

Mrs. Lasser, the widow of J. K. Lasser, the author of "Your Income Tax." had a radical mastectomy in 1952 in which a breast and part of her chest and underarm were removed.

She recalled that for seven months after she went home from the hospital, her husband hid in the bathroom while she undressed in the closet. She thought he couldn't bear to look at her body; he thought she would be embarrassed if he did.

Eventually, they talked out the problem, and it was overcome. "I guess the most important thing is to have a very loving husband," said Paula Green, the president of Green, Dolmatch, Inc., a Manhattan advertising agency. let them auction it for me," he The number of individual owners of stock in the country grew steadily from about 6.5 mil-lion in the early 1950s to an estimated 32.5 million in early 1972. About two years ago, however, the trend began to reverse itself, and early this year the number was estimated to be about 30.9 million. In addition, millions of investors reduced their stock holdings. A result of the stock-market exodus was that many brokerage firms, hard-hit financially, opened special departments dealing in insurance, real-estate trusts, commodities, options and other alternatives to stocks and bonds Many investors, however, decided to avoid brokerage firms altogether.

"Novel Approach A relatively novel approach was taken by Nancy and Dale Reinker of Georgetown, Conn. The couple evaluated their financial position—savings certificates, stocks and real estate were among their holdings—their career goals and the economy. They decided they wanted to go into business for themselves.

Borrowing money from a bank and dipping into their savings, they set up a business with $30,-Mr. Reinker, formerly a sales executive with a large company, became a manufacturer's representative. He bought a franchise operation which sells bedroom furnishings in nearby

Another Miami investor, a 31-year-old attorney, said that she has been investing in large-de-nomination certificates of deposit by forming pools with five or six other persons. Each of the pool partners puts up about $20,000 toward a $120,000 certificate, which yields about 11 1/2 per cent

"With our present 12 per cent inflation," she said, "it's the only way not to lose too much on the real value of the dollar."

Some investors have been cashing in their savings certificates, which pay less than certificates of deposit and are issued in smaller d: ominations, to invest in U.S. Treasury bills.

Converting to Cash Melvin Riefberg a 45-year-old Philadelphia accountant, said he began about a year ago to conver certificates into cash so he could buy Treasury notes in $5,000 denominations that averaged an annual return of about 9 per cent.

One, drafted by the Bolling committee, would make sweeping changes such as restricting representatives to service on only one major committee, dividing the Education and Labor Committee, increasing the power of the Rules Committee and reducing the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Committee,

A second proposal, compiled by a committee of the Democrati aucus headed by Rep. Butler Hansen of Washington, would make fewer changes in the existing committee structure. A third plan by Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., seeks to strike a compromise between the Bolling and Hansen plans.

Rep. Leonor Sullivan, D-Mo., chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, said that the Bolling proposals "would tear asunder the fabric of the House and lead to a great deal of lasting bitterness."

Unconventional Diplomacy

Relations between the United States and Castro's Cuba have never fitted into any very formal pattern, and have engaged the attention of many historians and poblicists in trying to track down the tentative zigs and the flamboyant zags of their jagged course. It is quite in keeping with the kaleidoscopic past, therefore, that the first demisemi-official efforts to bring some kind of normality to those relations should be highly unconventional.

The gesture from Washington was made by two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sens. Javits and Pell. They were greeted in Havana with warmth and sent home in a glow of hope. Bot in between, Fidel Castro let loose a fine rhetorical fireworks display, directed against U.S.

It would be easy enough to retort to Castro's charges of Washington's interference abroad by citing the once quite unanimous opinion in the Americas that Cuban revolutionary intervention in the domestic concerns of neighbor states was a clear and dangerous fact. And to point out that Washington's folly and wrong in the Bay of Pigs was followed by Havana's folly and wrong of importing offensive missiles. But a sequence of exchanging charges will not resolve the basic problem of Cuba's position in today's Western Hemisphere, to say nothing of a large number of other American capitals.

There are real difficulties in improving discourse and trade between Cuba and the United States guite apart from the confusions and bitterness created by the events of the past dozen years. There are claims and counter-claims involving money; there is the status of the U.S. base on Guantanamo; there is the Cuban association with the Soviet Union. One does not hear much of the Monroe Doctrine in these days: It has been largely overtaken by technology and events. But the missile crisis is not all that distant in time, détente is not all that secure, Castro is not all that independent to remove the island-90 miles from Floridacompletely from strategic considerations.

Nevertheless, it is possible now to move toward bringing Cuba into a less strained connection with the mainland. Other Latin American states want it to be done, and have taken steps in that direction; both Caha and the United States could benefit by it, and the mutual risks that loomed so threateningly during the cold war have sensibly diminished. What specific avenues were opened by the Javits-Pell mission remain to be disclosed, but the atmosphere seems favorable to at least explore them. Unconventional diplomacy can have its advantages in unconventional situations.

Aid Endangered

The Ford administration has chosen to risk two of its most urgent foreign economic programs rather than tolerate a modestand probably ineffective - congressional effort to limit presidential discretion in the disbursal of foreign aid funds.

Neither a $200-million program for food and notrition assistance nor the $350 million earmarked for economic development in Egypt and Syria would be likely to clear the Congress if the White House's present legislative strategy were allowed to prevail. As ft is. Monday's legislative maneuvers by both supporters and opponents of the administration seemed to throw the whole foreign aid program into question.

The administration has found fault with four provisions in the foreign aid bill as it was expected to emerge from the Senate: A sharply lowered ceiling on aid to Indochina, a ban on aid to Turkey, and repeal of two long-standing loopholes by which the President could redistribute aid allotments and draw down defense department stocks of military materiel for other countries' use opon a simple declaration that he found it in the national interest to do so.

Virtually on the eve of a touch-and-go Senate debate, the administration reinforced the critics of foreign aid by indicating it would prefer no new programs at all to a bill containing those restrictions. This seems in itself a dubious ordering of priorities. The strategy envisaged that the two endangered programs could be revived in some other legislative form. It seems a grievous misreading of congressional sensitivities to imagine that measures sought by the administration could somehow be reinstated without having the restrictions sought by Congress reinstated at the same

The promised aid to Egypt is central to Secretary of State Kissinger's credibility as a Middle East negotiator, just as a tangible offer of technology for food and nutrition relief is a key step in the American campaign for international economic cooperation. It is more important to the country that these programs not be sacrificed than that the President's discretionary powers be retained. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Diplomats Protest

The association might well object to Mr. Flanigan on the additional ground that, with Spain already entering the inevitably difficult post-Franco era-even though the aging generalissimo is still nominally in charge—the Madrid post is not one for onthe-job training. International Opinion

Whither Portugal?

The apparent irrationalism intermittently observable in Lisbon is undoubtedly due largely to the lack of clarity in the power makeup of the heterogeneous and delicatelybalanced structure of the bodies making up the government. These, after all, have no mandate from the nation and are in theory only there in a caretaker role until elections can clarify the situation next spring. But the irrationalism is also an expression of general insecurity, with differences of view as to how to handle urgent problems of the moment, rivalry for the future electorate and probably some sort of subconscious fear of "sinister forces' all overlaying one another in changing permutations. The latest sensation and the shift in the power structure ft has caused have probably strengthened the left even further. On the other hand, Spinola's successor and sometime military superior. Costa Gomes, is undoobtedly a moderate and a cold fish into the bargain. Whether he will be successful in restoring some sort of level-headedness to those around him, or whether it will shortly become his own turn to walk the plank, remains to be seen.

-From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

Portugal has stumbled against the selfevident truth that democracy, as practiced in Western Europe, is an organic growth. It does not spring fully-armed from the ruins of a dictatorship. The country may have further and worse crises to endure before the form of its governmental system is

What is happening now is the struggle for position before the elections in March, which are far enough away to cause anxiety not only about the interim but about whether they will ever take place. Only the left is organized . . But aithough Gen. Spinola was clearly not the man to preside over the current bedlam, there is good reason to believe that it will not all be "crisis and chaos," as he fears. . . .

Kissinger, Haig and J. Edgar

By William Safire

WASHINGTON-Last year, after learning that I was among the 17 government officials and newsmen illegally wiretapped, I called Al Haig to find out if President Nixon had known about the tap on my line.
"Absolutely not," said Haig. "The President was ahoeked to learn about it just now."

The general was lying, it seems, In testimony released as part of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's whitewash of the Kissinger-Haig role in wiretapping, Sen. Fulbright asked: "So is it correct to conclude that the President personally requested that each of these individuals be

Our next NATO commander replied artfully: "... Three or four weeks ago the President signed a letter suggesting that he approved them, and, therefore, I believe

Curious Thought

Then Halg added a curious thought about Nixon's approval of each of these invasions of privacy:
"Now, how formally that was done, whether it was done by Mr. Ehrlichman or Mr. Haldeman in his behalf, or Dr. Kissinger run-ning it by him, I can't say." Consider those words, because they reveal a conception of a phiral president that is at the root of so much of the Watergate agony. When I recently remonstrated with Halg for lying to me last year about whether the President "knew," he replied in the same vein: "You know, Bill, "the President" is more than one man."

The idea of a hydra-headed president, with accountability diffused and blame unfixable, is the Kissinger-Haig defense again at bearing responsibility for their active sponsorship of an illegal White House spying operation They were just "following orders" from a president who in their eyes—was sometimes J. Edgar Hoover, sometimes John Mitchell and once in a while the individual who had been elected to the job.

Spying on his colleagues was necessary, Klasinger explained over the sound of Sen. Case's sympathetic chicking, to show the flerceness of his own loyaltyafter all Henry had long ex-perience in Washington under Democrats: "I was a friend of both Jack and Robert Kennedy... In 1967 I conducted negotiations with the North Vietnamese for Harriman and Katzenbach. I saw a great deal of Robert Kennedy before his assassination and, of course, I was a consultant to the President then."

Forgotten

This decade-long record of toplevel Washington experience was suddenly forgotten by Kissinger when asked to explain his remark to director Hoover that Henry and his friends "would destroy whoever did this" leaking.

"I was new in Washington," he explained. "... I might have had a tendency to show him that I was alert to the danger of secu-

Hoover would then get written authorization from the attorney general and the tsps went on. ROME.—There is a scurrious rumor here to the effect that somebody in the American Embeary has been seen having lunch in a Roman trattoria with some-body in the Communist party. There may be a perfectly simple explanation for this. But considering what sort of thing it might put into the Italian Com-munists' minds, not to mention the Russians' minds, our man in the embassy ought to watch his

If there is anything that might make the Russians nervous, it is the idea that we Americans would no longer mind too much if the Communists should join the government here. That would be the end of the Yalta line. And if there is anything the Russians have considered sucrosanct in foreign policy for well over a quarter of a century, it is the

Whether for better or worse, this geopolitical line drawn down the middle of Europe by Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill in World War II has withstood every onlaught of time. If not for the Yalta line, Italy might well be a Communist state by now. But Poland, East Germany, Hungary, Romania and Czechoslovakia might well not be Communist states by now. Czechoslovakia in particular might never have gone Communist in the first place. It is documented history that the Communist coup there in 1948 was possible only because Gen. Eisenhower, in scrupulous regard for the Yalta line, refused to let Gen. Patton's troops move in to liberate Prague before the Red Army could get there. It is also common knowledge that the Red Army's invasion of Prague in 1968 was only possible because the Kremlin could count absolutely on continuing American respect for the same Yalta line. In fact, there is strong evidence that the Russians asked for and got explicit reassurance to this effect from Washington before sending a single Red Army tank across the Czechoslovak border. Over the previous decado or so, the Eussians could safely rely on the same sort of invaluable Ameri-can detachment in Budapest, Warsaw and East Berlin,

After the U.S. Economic Summit

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON.—Despite a certain amount of demagoguery and an inevitable, irreducible degree of partisanship, the U.S. "economic summit" did about as much as could reasonably have been expected to prepare the ground for plowing a new economic policy.

For one thing, the summit demonstrated almost universal agreement that the problems bedeviling Americans are tough, complex, interrelated and resistant to quick solutions.

For another, it dramatized the fact that responsibility for longterm solutions must be shared by the Republican administration and the Democratic Congress. Leaders of both parties will be operating under the healthy prod of the knowledge that their per-formance will be the main issue in the next presidential election.

Momentum

By pledging to provide his own ecommendations within the next week, President Ford has assured that the momentum of the summit will not be lost. And by moving with dispatch himself, he has put pressure on the congressional Democrats to redeem their pledge to act this year on needed economic legislation.

As a practical matter, Congress cannot do much between now and election day. The Democrats are not going to forfeit the economio issue in the midterm campaign by endorsing Mr. Ford's sugges-tions, but if Republican candidates find the White House program palatable, the next four weeks can provide a healthy dialogue about alternatives in economic policy and set the stage for congressional action in the post-election session.

The most important precents for that action were set forth by Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y. one of the leading Republican economic policy men in Congress.

"Wherever we're going," he said, "we'd better get started and since there isn't any quick solution, and the long-term effort is going to affect and involve everybody, we'd better have plenty of guidance and mileposts measure progress along the In line with that suggestion, it might be helpful if the President provided a timetable or set of targets for the action he recommends so the public can hold both the Congress and the President accountable for what they undertake to deliver,

Mr. Ford is e man of Congress, and he has a realistic sense of the pace of complex legislation on Capitol Hill. But if he believes the national interest requires a trade bill by a certain date, and a tax bill by a certain date, and energy legislation by a certain date, and public em-ployment legislation by a certain date, then he ought to set forth that timetable.

But he has to be equally tough on himself and his administration colleagues in judging fairly and reporting honestly the progress-or lack of progress-on the battles against inflation and recession. Alan Greenspan has set the right tone, in banishing the fairy-tale talk of his predecessor at the Council of Economic Advisers, in favor of some stark appraisals of our economic situation. His candor ought to be the model for all administration economic spokesmen.

In addition to pressure for action, and strict standards for evaluating progress, one other thing is needed from the national leadership. That is a clear signal that equity will be just as im-portant as economic efficiency in setting new policies.

The American people are not children. They understand that some real sacrifices must be made to keep this economic squeeze from becoming an economic catestrophe.

If essential defense and domestic expenditures are to be met, and new investments in energy and resource development made, it is obvious someone is going to have to pay higher taxes.

If the inflationary cycle is going to be broken, without putting the economy back into the straitjacket of rigid controls, it is obvious that some "catch-up" wage and price increases will have to be foregone.

If savings are to be increased and new capital is to be provided to expand production of basic commodities, then consumption of luxury items must be dis-

Those things are clear to everyone, even if the mix of policies for achieving them is not,

Fair Play

The citizens and voters of this country may not be economic experts, but they have an acute sense of fair play. Inflation and sion have not affected all groups and classes equally; some nave been squeezed far harder

As the black economic summit meeting said in its manifesto, The burden of halting inflation must not be placed on those least able to shoulder the costs." If Mr. Ford addresses himself both to the task of curing the economy and of providing some equitable relief for those who have been the hardest-hit victims of inflation and recession, then he can expect a positive response in both Congress and the country.

Hungarian Joins Soviet Drive

Red World Parley Goal of Brezhnev, Kadar

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Oct. 1 (NYT).-Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev and his Hungarian counterpart, Janes Kadar, yesterday ended six days of talks by pledging to promote regional party meetings that could lead to a world conference of Communist

A joint communiqué issued late last night also disclosed that Mr. Brezhnev, Mr. Kadar and their senior advisers had concentrated on coordinating economic planning and development of their countries for the 1976-80 period, but without resolving all Despite the importance attached by both sides to development rested and later released on bail. of fuel and energy resources-an increasing problem for Hungary and the rest of Eastern Europe the communique indicated that they had not reached agreement on terms of trade. Diplomatic circles suggested that the discussions probably touched on price levels as well as the amounts

Hungary.

The Soviet Union is presumed to want to increase the price of the oil that it sells to Eastern Europe, raising it to about the new high levels charged on the world market, rather than extend beyond the end of 1975 the price levels that it has accorded East European allies during the current five-year-plan period.

Mr. Kadar, who last year curtailed some aspects of Hungary's relatively free-wheeling "new economic mechanism," brought with him his new economic planning chief, Karol Nemeth, as well as Premier Jeno Fock and other top

In his welcoming speech last Thursday, Mr. Brezhnev empha-sized the need to "make ever fuller use of the possibilities" of close economic cooperation among Communist states and to procance of the Warsaw Pact's economic arm, Comecon.

The relative mildness of the communique's language and the references to the need for "further work to coordinate the five-year plans," in realms of modern technology as well as fuels, suggested that differences remained despite the extremely cordial atmosphere of Mr. Kadar's visit and the Soviet reception of the Hungarian leader

During his public appearances here, Mr. Kadar has acted as a spokesman for the proposed new worldwide conference of Communist parties, halling the last one in 1969 as a success. The Soviet Union, which since July, 1973, reportedly has been the prime mover in private for this conclave, has taken a more modest public role, evidently to avoid appearing too eager.

SAIGON, Oct. 1 (NYT).-President Nguyen Van Thieu denied tonight allegations of corruption that had been recently lodged against him, but offered to resign from office if, as he put it, "the entire people and army no longer have confidence in me."

In a generally conciliatory twohour televised talk to the nation.

Mr. Thien also promised to amend a restrictive decree on political parties that to effect has made his own Democracy party the only legal political organization in South Vietnam.

The somber, straightforward discourse, which had been eagerbere, was Mr. Thieu's personal response to a loose opposition coalition of Catholics, Buddhists and newspapermen that has be-come increasingly vocal in the

Disparate Opposition

As such, it indicated that Mr. Thieu's regime will continue a flexible, partially accommodating approach to the disparate opposition, which has yet to demonstrate mass support.

"I am not disturbed by a few small demonstrations," Mr. Thieu declared confidently.

At the same time, woven throughout the President's re-marks were repeated warnings that domestic unrest would only play into the hands of the Communists who, be asserted, were planning a "general offensive" timed for early next year. At several points, Mr. Thieu suggested that some of his domestic opponents were merely "lackeys" of

Kenyans Cancel Work Permit of A U.S. Geologist

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 1 (WP).— Kenya has canceled the work permit of an American geologist involved in a legal battle with high government officials for ownership of a hige ruby mine located in the Tsavo National

Diclomatic sources in Nairobi said that Elliott (Tim) Miller, who had been in hiding in Kenya for nearly a month, turned him-self in to immigration officials Saturday and was informed that his permit was being lifted on the grounds that his original applica-tion, filed in 1966, was filled out

Introducing the Airbus. Extravagant on comfort. Stingy on fuel.

The Airbus is a remarkable aircraft combining two advantages never before present on short flights: maximum comfort and large capacity.

The Airbus gives you lots of legroom, more than you've ever had on short flights. It has great big doors, spacious entryways, two wide aisles. And because there's twice the cabin baggage space, you can carry aboard larger bags than ever before.

Even a large suitcase of 45 by 37 cm is permitted, and it stores conveniently in an enclosed space over your seat. Throughout the Airbus, seating is arranged so that you're never more than one seat away from an aisle. You can even choose to sit in a no-smoking section if you wish. In fact, every detail down to the lighting and air conditioning has been conceived with your comfort and convenience in mind.

One of the Airbus' greatest advances is its engines. They're the quietest jet engines ever developed. And moreover, they use a lot less fuel than previous jets. With the Airbus' large capacity, there's a tremendous saving on fuel per passenger.

So when you fly the Airbus, go ahead and enjoy its extravagance on comfort. It's justified by its stinginess on fuel.

Planes' Collision In France in 1973 Linked to Strike

PARIS, Oct. 1 (UPI).-An investigating committee has concluded that a strike of airport traffic controllers was indirectly responsible for a March 5, 1973 collision in France of two Spanish airliners—a crash which killed 68 -the newspaper Le Monde said

The committee's report, as quot ed by the newspaper, said that military air controllers, called by the government to replace the strikers, made mistakes in direct-ing the flights of an Iberia Air Lines DC-9, en route from Palma, Mallorca, to London, and a Spantax Airline Coronado, flying from Madrid to London.

The military's tower mistakes caused the sircraft to collide at 30,000 feet near Nantes, the report quoted by Le Monde said. All 68 persons abourd the DC-9 were killed when the airliner plummeted in flames to earth. The Coronado landed safely with a crushed wing tip at a military airport near Cognac.

Waving Fingers at the Gale

For today's instant communication is the instant simplification that goes with it. When President Ford and Mr. Kissinger bore down on the very tough problem posed by global inflation—and the part played in it by arbitrary increases in the price of oil -it was promptly dubbed, by the instant analysts, a "get tough" policy. And the response, from, among others, the Shah of Iran, visiting in faraway Australia, was not to what the President and the secretary of state said, but to how their remarks had been interpreted. "No one can wave a finger at us," said the Shah, "because we will wave a finger back."

Waving fingers to still a global economic gale is about as effective as whistling for a wind in a calm. The developing o'll-producing nations have a case, and the Shah made it, sketchily, in his interview. The President of Venezuela has made it at greater length and with rather more plausibility in advertisements directed toward the American public. The case goes back to the crux of the matter: the terms of

Producers of all raw materials have been very largely at the mercy of world market prices for their commodities. This has been tempered at times by various international cartel arrangements, as in sugar and coffee, and differing forms of local control have affected the price of other foodstuffs. Least affected by actual price-fixing have been in-

One of the penalties the world must pay dustrial products in a highly competitive market. Yet the costs of those products have risen, largely through demand both among the industrialized and developing nations, and it is the latter who have been most severely affected.

To reduce these diverse and complex factors in the terms of trade to a rational basis will be far from easy. Lowering prices for industrial products does not only require shaving profits-and thereby reducing incentives and capital for investment-but lowered wages as well, so long as energy and raw material costs are fixed, or increase, And that, as the current election campaign in Britain will probably make clear, creates a very dangerops political situation. France is approaching its energy problem bravely, but there is little indication that its course will reduce the costs of its products. There is no facile answer to the questions posed by terms of trade in unilateral action by any

That answer can only be supplied by what the President and Mr. Kissinger advocate: International action that will take the interests of all into account. But in the meanwhile, oil prices, set by the world's most effective cartel, are adding to the confusion. making both manufactured goods and food more expensive for everyone-including the oil producers. The Shah may wave his finger at that, but if he hopes Iran will be more than a big off well, he must take it into account.

Détente

No one is going to oppose the ideal of Soviet-American détente, in its pure meaning, any more than one would willingly choose a world of tension and hostility in preference to a "generation of peace." The issue is whether the pursuit of détente is being wisely conducted, with proper regard for fundamental interests and full realization of pitfalls as well as rewards,

Secretary of State Kissinger's long-promised testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week provided a convenient summation of the sound conceptual arguments which he has developed in a series of statements over recent years.

He gave needed emphasis to the point that détente is a continuing process, a dynamic relationship, not a state of grace that at a given time will be finally achieved, signed and sealed, permitting the two superpowers . to move on to other things. Détente is a pattern of mutual behavior that arises from To be effective, in short, détente must give each side something that it wants.

The chief reservation about the policy of détente, as conceived by Mr. Kissinger under two presidents now, is that this country may find itself settling for minimal tangible benefit for itself in pursuit of a desirable abstraction, while the Soviet leadership successfully extracts real concessions in return for empty lip service.

Nowhere is this danger more clearly raised than in Secretary Kissinger's discussion of expanding trade relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. "The significance of trade . . . is inflated out of all proportion," he said, when political concessions—on Soviet emigration policy or other matters—are demanded in exchange.

It is difficult to talk with a single Soviet official these days without learning that, far from being inflated out of proportion, trade is the single most important component in detente, as viewed from Moscow. Easing of nuclear tensions, formal recognition of the European status quo-these are desired goals of Soviet foreign policy; but the desperate, driving impulse of détente is access to Western advanced technology.

The broadest criticism to be made of the detente policy as so far implemented is that the extent of the political cost which the Russians are willing to pay for this access has scarcely even been tested in American diplomacy.

Mr. Kissinger argues that this country's bargaining power is limited, for the technology the Russians so desire is available as well from other countries as the United States. True in principle, perhaps, but demonstrably false in the recent years' experience of frustrated Soviet trade missions around the world. The dimensions of scale in the Soviet economy are so vast, the capacity of the Western industrial worldexcluding the United States - so small by comparison, that only this country can begin to provide the massive capacity which Moscow requires.

Even the working procedures on the American side of the trade bargaining process can the contrary. While the Soviets envisage their many transactions in the broad context of political and economic needs, the American side has too often been content to let private entrepreneurs make their own deals on a purely commercial basis. If the government finally moves in to consider these transactions from a national interest viewpoint, it may be too late to matter.

The danger of détente as it has been pursued, therefore, is that the United States may get an eloquently expressed design for interrelationship, while the Russians get a new generation of computers Compounding this imbalance, principles of behavior-however solemnly agreed—can be readily revoked, technological knowledge once disclosed can never be withdrawn.

Many in the executive branch as well as the Congress are well aware of these dangers. It is their responsibility to restrain an enthusiastic political leadership in the White House and State Department from succumbing to the abstract desirability of superpower détante, and insist that every single economic and political engagement with the Soviet Union be studied for its measure of mutual benefit, on its own merits.

Toward Cyprus Peace

The overwhelming (307 to 90) approval by drawals that will make fruitful negotiations the House of a binding cutoff in military aid to Turkey until "substantial progress" is made toward a Cyprus settlement dramatizes American revulsion against the massive Turkish aggression on the island. The action was also aimed at forcing administration compliance with laws that mandate such a cutoff when a recipient country misuses American military assistance.

Secretary of State Kissinger warned Congress that this move would be "destructive" of his efforts to advance a solution for Cyprus, but the exact opposite seems more plausible. Washington will now find it very difficult to maintain anything like the normal flow of military aid unless Turkeycurrently the strongest party by far in the dispute-will demonstrate greater willingness to order the troop and territorial with-possible. Mr. Kissinger is now in a stronger position to make that point than he was before the House voted

One hopeful development is an indication from the Turks that the negotiations between leaders of the two Cyprus communities should move on from the agreement on prisoner exchange and strictly humanitarian matters to issues of political substance. These talks can continue even while Greece and Turkey are preoccupied with their election campaigns.

Prospects for a Cyprus settlement and solutions for other combustible Greek-Turkish questions-including those involving oil drilling rights, territorial waters and air space in the Aegean - will be greatly enhanced if both countries emerge from the elections with strong majority governments. He replied in terms of American values: "I would say that our genius does not reside in clandestine activities on a broad scale." He added the caveat that he thought it would be dangerous to abolish "certain types of these activities."

Another public expression of Klasinger's views on interference in other countries was President Nixon's speech of last June 5, warning against too strong American support for the cause of Soviet Jews and dissenters. The voice was the voice of Nixon, but the hands were surely of Kissinger:

We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we expect them cooperative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs. We cannot gear our foreign policy to transformation of other societies? While opposing intervention in behalf of freedom in the Soviet Union, we now know, Kissinger presided over a program of sub-version that belped turn Chile from democracy to tyranny. He did so not with his public attitude of concern for American values and respect for national sovereignty but with an arrogant assumption of the right to determine the fate of other societies. He reportedly told the Forty Committee, which controls ecret activities abroad:

"I don't see why we need to stand by and watch a country go Communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people."

Humpty Dumpty

The point of reciting the record is not to catch Kissinger in some more dissembling. Anywho cares knows by now that that is his nature. Even after the Chile esper was exposed, he could not resist misrepresenting its character when urged congressional leaders not to restrain covert operations. He is like Humpty Dumpty, who said in a rather scornful tone: When I use a word, it means just what I chose it to meanneither more nor less."

Mideast 'Commitment'

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON.—The idea of sorting out and reducing U.S. foreign commitments is such a firm part of the post-Vietnam conventional wisdom that it comes as something of a shock-but, on reflection, a useful and encouraging one—to be warned that the Mideast is one place where American commitments may have to be increased.

Indeed, as set forth by Harvard latest issue of Foreign Affairs magazine, it's already happening The Syrian-Israeli and Egyptian-Israeli troop disengagement ac-cords were brought into being by American commitments to provide aid and support to the local parties and to police the accords.

"Additional and increasingly weighty American commitments will have to be made, Safran says in his article entitled "Engage-ment in the Middle East," to move negotiations forward on the much more difficult substantive

Bridle

At the word "commitment," to be sure, many Americans instinctively bridle. To them it means involvement trouble over-reach ing, troops, war, Vietnam.

To Safran, however, and to Secretary of State Henry Kis-singer, whose Mideast policy he admires, "commitment" has a contrary, positive aspect: to pro-vide a mutually agreeable link and cement between the parties and, without giving either side an advantage in preparation for war, to give both sides incentives and channels to move toward a

To judge by the record so far, this is a popular course for Americans. With virtually none of the sharp debate that still marks deliberations on Vietnam, the Congress has accepted the troop disengagement accords and voted the substantial sums of aid requested to implement them. To an extent that few could have foreseen, popular partisanship in the Arab-Israeli dispute has yielded to the consensus that support for both sides is in their mutual interest and in the American interest, too.

Ray of Light

This is a ray of light in a dark sky, one not adequately appreciated. Kissinger's simtle diplomacy has taken the popular spotlight, but for the long haul you need a policy supported by Congress—surely Vletnam taught all of us that and Kissinger's Mideast strategy seems both to require and to earn such support in a way that could not be imagined if the policy aimed exclusively at either the security of Israel or the assurance of Arab oil,

There is no reason to believe, by the way, that Gerald Ford's accession to the presidency has altered the essentials of this

Not so long ago the guiding principle of American global policy, or at least the guiding rhetoric, lay in the softly comforting Nixon doctrine, whose promise it was to ease the security burden of friendly states from American shoulders onto their own. As Mr. Nixon no doubt knew, Americans were aching to hear that their retreat from a pertain kind of activist world leadership would leave our friends as well as ourselves better off.

The emerging Mideast truth is. however, that a hands-off policy is out of the question. It is hard to think of any similar situation where all the parties to a dispute were so eager to involve the United States in its settlement. If in Vietnam we were a large part of the problem, in the Mideast we are a large part of the solution. This is a heavy charge to us but it is a tribute and a source of leverage too.

Permanent Part

So it is that, while the United States is seeking to reduce its responsibilities in many other parts of the world, it is consciously increasing its role overallthough not in the crucial sense of military participation—in the Mideast and is making itself a virtually permanent part of the political furniture of that region.

No one can fairly say there are no dangers for the United States. The rationale for expanding American commitments in the new flux is to keep those dangers within bounds. It means we are building ourselves into an uncertain future, but the alternative -the replacement of the American restraining hand with a Soviet manipulative hand—seems

In the past Kissinger has shied away from acknowledging that the United States is becoming "guarantor" of a Mideast settlement. In this matter Safran finds him excessively defensive. The administration would be better advised to stress its "mounmental" interests in the region "instead of minimizing the commitments that would serve them," Sofran argues. "American weelth and power and American intelligeuce and idealism bave sektom had a worthier object."

portant and least understood of the world's major industries. Ind, one measure of the general ignorance about agriculture is the fact that many people think it is odd to call agriculture an industry. But social analyst Peter Drucker is correct:

"Agriculture in the developed countries had become the most productive, the most capital-intensive, the most highly mechanized, and altogheter the most "industrial' of all modern industries It is an industry with a very high input of scientific knowledge per unit of production. From being the most traditional sector, agriculture in the developed countries has become the most progressive

Fertilizer

The industrial dimension of agriculture—and the energy component-is increasingly important even in developing nations. It involves the use of heavy machinery and, most important, fertilizer.

MIRTRY M Weles

One billion people—a quarter of the world's population—is fed by the extra crop yields that fertilizers produce.

In recent years India became virtually self-sufficient in wheat thanks to a new grain that is very dependent on fertilizer. But most important fertilizer is nitrogen, and much of it comes from natural gas and petroleum. This year India is suffering a onemillion-ton fertilizer shortage, in large measure because oil produc-tion has been cut and because soaring fertilizer costs caused the U.S. government to restrict fertilizer exports. (Even with a partially protected supply, U.S. farmers this year will spend 50 per cent more—nearly $2 fallion more—on fertilizer than they spent last year.)

India Loses

For every 15-cent pound of fertilizer that India lacks, India loses 10 pounds of wheat. This year's fertilizer shortage will cost India 10 million tons of grain-a year's supply for 50 million In-

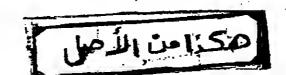

Americans use three million tons of fertilizers on lawns, rose gardens, nonpleatic football fields. neteries and for other ornamental purposes. Various off-producing nations are "flaring" burning as waste 4.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas each year. That is 10 times more natural gas than the United States uses each year to produce nitrogen fertilizer and it is enough to produce double the current world consumption of nitrogen fertilizer.

When the oil-producing nations made their price and production decisions last winter, they did not intend to produce a fertilizer shortage to discombobulate the world agricultural industry, and to expose millions to famine. But the fact that this great evil was unintended will not make any. one's life easier, or longer.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Siemens Sales Up 10%

Worldwide sales of Siemens rose about 10 per cent to 17 billion deutsche marks in the year ended Sept. 30 from 15.45 billion DM a year earlier, reports Peter von Siemens, supervisory board chairman of the electronics firm. About half of the total turnover was attributable to foreign sales. The inflow of new orders rose to more than 19 billion DM from 17.78 billion DM in the previous fiscal year and, for the first time, more orders were received from foreign sources than from domestic customers. Exports rose about 20 per cent in the latest year, while domestic sales gained only 5 per cent. The gains in the previous year were 9 and 7 per cent,

Japanese in Siberian Venture

Four Japanese companies have formed the Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co. to undertake proposed Japanese-Soviet development of oil and natural-gas resources off Siberia. The equal partners in the firm are C. Itoh, Overseas Petroleum Development Co., Japan Petroleum Development Corp. and Marubeni Corp. The company will prospect for and develop oil and natural-gas resources on the continental shelf northeast and southwest of Sakhalin ..

Massey Sees Continuing Growth Massey-Ferguson expects sales and earnings growth in its year ending Oct. 31 to be in line with the growth of the first nine months, says Albert Thornbrough, president. The Torontobased agricultural equipment maker previously reported nine-month net income rose 12 per cent from the year-earlier period while sales increased 24 per cent. Unless something catastrophic occurs, we expect the trends of the nine months to continue," he says. The company has just completed an agreement with Rheinstahl, the West German steel and engineering group, to purchase its Hanomag construction machinery division for the equivalent of more than $45.2 million. The exact price will depend on the valuation of Hanomag's inventories. Massey-Ferguson will invest a further $5 million in Hancmag over the next year in an effort to turn the money-losing unit into a profitable operation by 1975. Massey-Ferguson expects to make record capital investments of more than $100 million a year for each of the next three fiscal years. The money is to be spent on a wide variety of projects, including new production capacity, replacement and cost improvement.

White, Weld Takes Over U.S. Firm

White, Weld & Co., the U.S. investment banking firm, plans to take over G.H. Walker, Laird Inc. which itself went through a merger a little more than a year ago. Unlike other recent Wall Street mergers, financial troubles were not a factor. Paul Hallingby jr., president of both White, Weld & Co. and its corporate parent. White Weld Boldings, says that Walker, Leird was "not in financial difficulties." He places the capitalisa-tion of White, Weld Holdings at "over $50 million" before the merger and ot "around $60 million" after the merger. Goth firms reported a ratio of debt-to-capital, as of Aug. 31. of 4-to-1—well within the 15-to-1 maximum allowed by the New York Stock Exchange. White Weld has 12 U.S. offices and seven abroad. Walker, Laird has 14 U.S. offices-nine of them in cities where White. Wold is unrepresented. The agreement to merge, subject to approval by the NYSE, is expected to be completed by Nov. 1.

Israel Fund Loss Arouses Concern About Investment

JERUSALEM Oct. 1 (AP).-Israci Corp's loss estimated at up to $30 million is shaking Israeli economic circles and arousing concern for the country's ability to attract badly needed forcign

The finance committee of the Knesset (parliament) is reportedly being convened to consider the

The most specific recycling proposal was outlined by Mr. Healey. According to his plan, the nil countries would be invited to invest surplus money in the IMF and receive a normal rate of interest.

Privately, Mr. Healey has suggested that the DAP might attract as much as $30 billion from Arab nations, who would then have an "excellent asset in the form of a French Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade endorsed the Healey plan in principle but sug-gested that it need not be the only vehicle for recycling. French officials said that it would be reasonable for the IMF to start with a $5-billion to $10-billion program, counting on private hanks and bilateral deals to work off more of the oil cartel's sur-

The United States has had two arguments against a bigger IMP re-lending facility: First, it would be tantamount to abandoning the fight for lower prices, and second, it would transfer to the IMF all nf the risk when it comes to distributing the money to countries in trouble. And as a 50 per cent shareholder in the IMP, the United States alone would be assuming half of the risk, In his speech, Mr. Healey claimed that a new IMF re-lending facility would have many ad-vantages, including the initiation of a useful dialogue for the first time between the oil producers and oil consumers.

Exceptional Security

The cartel countries, Mr. Hea-ley said, also 'might well feel that the creation of a major new facility in which to invest a large part of their earnings with exceptional security" at normal rates of interest would enable them to make more "soft loans" to poor countries.

France's Fourcade, speaking also as this year's chairman of the European Economic Community's Council of Ministers, said that the EEC itself is "currently studying the possibility of participating on its own account in recycling oper-

A high French official noting U.S. objections to a major IMF facility, told reporters that it would be better to permit the cartel countries to escape responsibility for some of the credit risks "than to face the economic crisis that would develop if we do nothing."

Moreover, he said that Euro-ceans have concluded that if the TAIF does not establish a broader recycling facility, most of the oil dollars will come to the United States, thus creating new ex-change rate problems between Europe and the United States.

"The fundamental problem in the present situation." the French official said. "is not so much a decline in oil prices. That is not plausible. The problem is to adapt to the higher prices, and organize our society and employment levels on a new price for

No Overkill

Mr. Simon went out of his way to reassure the Europeans that President Ford's forthcoming new economic program would not engage in overkill, leading to a recession here that would trigger a worldwide shump.

This fear is widely held outside of the United States. Mr. Healey expressed the common view yes terday when he said that ' of us can hope to avoid disaster if there is a severe recession in the United States."

Mr. Simon, nevertheless, reiterated his view that while there is a risk in moving "too slowly to relax restraints," here or in the rest of the world, "a much greater risk" would be to move "too rapid-ly toward expansive policies."

aspects of international finance. In Germany. In Europe. All over the world.

Landesbank Rheinland-Pfalz is at the crossroads of German commerce. In the middle of the booming Rhein-Main commercial complex-with its many advantages for International trade. And easy to reach-we're just 18 minutes from Frankfurt International Airport.

As one of the biggest and most respected all-purpose banks in Germany with assets of over DM 11 billion, we're in close touch everywhere.

Naturally we provide all the services you would expect from a bank as large as ours. But we specialize in corporate finance and in large, longterm loans.

凸 And we have an exceptionally high employee-to-client ratio. So we can make up a team to serve you personally and flexibly to tackle usual and unusual problems, large or small. Like yours.

If you would like detailed information about us and our services send us a telex. Today. Our number is 4 187 8181

We hold participating shares in banks in most financial centres on the Continent and in the Far East.

International banks increase investment in Wobaco

Share capital raised to $22 million

e Trading

Wobaco Holding Company S.A. of Luxembourg, owners of World Banking Corporation Limited of Nassau, Bahamas and banks and financial service companies in Luxembourg, London, Cayman and Jersey is increasing its share capital from $12,000,000 to $21,600,000.

This was approved by shareholders at a meeting in Toronto on September 27. They include Bank of America, Toronto Dominion Bank, Banque Lambert S.C.S., Banque Nationale de Paris, Banco de Santander, Commerzbank A.G., The Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank Ltd., Skandinaviska Enskilda Banken and F. van Lanschot Bankiers. Appropriate Government authorisations have been requested.

Mr. Tom B. Coughran, Chairman of Wobaco, told shareholders that net earnings for the first eight months of 1974, after write-downs for known and identifiable losses, were in excess of $2,000,000. The increase in share capital would be accomplished by converting a subordinated loan of $6,000,000 from the shareholders and by issuing new shares in the approximate amount of $3,600,000 which will be purchased by the existing shareholders.

In addition, the shareholders have guaranteed the commitment of the Holding Company with respect to issued but nil paid shares of World Banking Corporation Limited, which are subject to call at any time in the total amount of $15 million.

The Chairman reported on the restructuring programme of the Group which commenced in 1973 when the shareholders exchanged their shares in World Banking Corporation Limited Nassau for equal holdings in the newly organised Luxembourg Holding Company. This programme has been successfully achieved and all members of the Group are now subsidiaries of the Holding Company.

Knowing New York State makes all the difference in the world.

New York State enjoys a concentration of trade and economic influence unparalleled by any other state, unmatched by most countries.

New York presents you with a kaleidoscope of business opportunities.

To seize those opportunities best, to truly know New York, know it through us. Marine Midland Bank. The bank that knows New York.

We should. We've been banking in her towns and cities since 1839. Today, we're all over New York. Serving more than 200 communities with more than 300 banking offices. More banking locations than any other bank in the state.

Marine Midland is indeed a large banking organization. In fact, with resources exceeding $13 billion, it's the nation's twelfth-largest banking system. With widespread international capabilities as well. And to the international business community, New York's importance as a marketplace and financial center cannot be overstated.

New York City. With the great Port of New York. The World Trade Center. Wall Street, the heart of American financial life. There is also Rochester, world-famous for photographic equipment. Albany, an important grain shipping point? Syracuse, known for electrical equipment. And there is Buffalo, a major Great Lakes port.

We are anxious to share our, knowledge of this diverse, important market with you. Allow us to show you that personal involvement on the part of senior management is not a thing of the past.

Marine Midland Bank. Big bank resources. Personal service. All over New York State. It makes all the difference in the world.

repeating ourselves: His seccond book is much the same as the first and I enjoyed it just as much. I would have supposed that after having read one account of the life of a young veterinary surgeon in the hills of Yorkshire during the late 1930s. I would have had enough, but apparently I haven't. If Dr. Herriot writes a third book on this subject—as he probably will ...I'm sure I'll read and enjoy that one, too.

Although "All Things Bright and Beautiful" bears a strong resemblance to "All Creatures Great and Small," I find my-self responding to it partly for different reasons. In the first volume. I was so taken up with the animals that I didn't suffi-ciently appreciate the people. Perhaps, after reading a run of modern novels, I tended to gravitate toward some other form of Animais are ideal patientsthey don't try to outguess their doctors and the drams of salvation is one we never tire of. Then, too, a curable physical illness is almost refreshing in com-parison to the ubiquitous psychic complaints of the "highest" animal. In one instance, we see nature and the vet working hand in hand: Since he cannot cure a dying animal, Dr. Herriot gives it enough anesthetic to let it die in peace, without pain. This respite is enough for the animal to heal itself, and we realize that flesh is, or once was, sturdler stuff than we generally suppose. The glucose tube is not an inevitable replacement for the umbilicus

But as I was saying, you can read and sayor "All Things Bright and Beautiful" for its exof our own species. There's Dr. Herriot himself, a. veritable advertisement for the value of investing yourself in your work and for the incomparable charms of earned repose. His daily life is filled with challenges, which he meets with blood, sweat and humor, Although he is no James Hanley or Henry Green, he can tell a story as well, I would say, as any living veterinarian. And he has what I would call an optimal level of ego development; pride. and humility, confidence and diffidence, in just the right propor-

Against six hearts, West led the spade queen and the declarer examined the dummy with considerable dismay. The slam was not just a bad one but a virtually hopeless one, with a sure loser in each red suit.

True, there was one chance. South could have cashed all his side-suit winners, ruffed a spade and then led a trump. This would succeed if one defender held a singleton diamond and singleton ace of trumps. This legitimate chance amounted to about I per cent and was scarcely worth having, so South looked for an illegitimate chance—a swindle.

The opening lead was taken with the spade king, and a trump was led to West's ace. A diamond shift would have disturbed South's plan, but West continued naturally with the spade jack. South won and rattled off five rounds of trumps. On dummy's last trump, he discarded a dia-

Fired-Up Redskins Roll Over Broncos

By Leonard Shapiro

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (WP). -The Washington Redskins' defense held the Denver Broncos last night while the much-maligned Washington offense performed enough tricks to defeat the visitors, 30-3. Charley Taylor, the man with the stone fingers last week when he dropped two certain touch-down passes, made up for that with splendid scoring receptions of three and 11 yards Quarterback Bill Kilmer completed 17 of 23 passes for 223 yards and the two touchdowns. Duane Thomas scored a touchdown with 11 seconds to play. And Mark Moseley hit on field goals of 37, 22 and 18 yards es the Redskins improved their record to 2-1.

The defense, as usual, was magnificent. The Broncos could manage only a field goal in the third quarter and, when they threatened to make a game of it a few minutes later, twice they failed to gain the necessary yard for a first down at the Redskins' 11-vard line. All of that developed on a night when the Redskins dared to throw on first down, put a man in motion on almost every play and, for a change, pitch the long

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (NYT).-It was Robert (Tiger) Irsay, the owner, who dismissed Howard Schnellenberger, coach of the Baltimore Colts, this week and not Joe Thomas, the team's general manager, who had become accustomed to terminating the employment of Colt players and

In fact, Irsay shocked Thomas by immediately naming him as interim coach of a team which has little chance to achieve a winning record this season.

Irsay, in the habit of calling those around him "Tiger," executed the time-honored privilege of sports ownership. He made up his mind while patrolling the Baltimore sideline during the second half in Philadelphia Sunday as the Colts were being beaten hy the Eagles, 30-10, Irsay prefers Bert Jones at quarterback rather than Marty Domres, who has been starting. He asked Schnellenberger when he would replace Domres with Jones. The coach responded with a tart reply which he later could not recall. The retor led to his dismissal within the hour.

Thomas, a personnel scout before becoming general manager, has had no pro coaching exper-ience except brief tours as an as-sistent with the Colts, Rams and Toronto Argonauts in the 1950s.

After Sunday's game, Irsay said, "I have just fired the coach. Baltimore Colts will go on that field to win even if I have to play myself."

-Unseeded Ross Case of Australis upset American Arthur Ashe, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, last night to win the $16,000 first prize in the International Open tennis tournament at the Cow Palacc. Case, 22, who had never won a major tournament, defeatedthird-seeded Ashe in a match that could have gone either way. Case was down, 2-4, in tho third set and came back to win four games in a row, breaking Ashe's service twice.

Ashe had trouble with Case's serve throughout the first set. getting only five points in the five games the Australian served. Case got the first set's only servic break in the fourth game when he scored three times on hard forehand passing shots.

Both players held service through 4-4 of the second set, then exchanged service breaks. Ashe held his service, but Case faltered in the 12th game and double-faulted to lose it, four points to one, and the set, 7-5. Title and Maney

"I guess I started thinking about the title and the money and how I was gong to spend it when it got to 5-4 in the second set," Case sold. Leading 2-1 in the 10th game and within two points of a thing is not that we are in the business of overthrowing Indonesia vother peoples' governments, but of Sukarno. that we can still be surprised when somebody reminds us of it. In Asia, Latin America, Africa, the Mediterranean and the Middle East we have been propoing up and knocking down goveroments more or less openly for the last 25 years. It is an established policy. Everybody knows lt. It is supposed to be done covertly, which is only sensible if you hope to succeed, since publicity in matters of this sort can only make the natives resentful and defeat the project. Imagine the chauvinistic rallying around President Ford that would occur if Canada, say, announced that its agents were going to destabilize U. S. society so that discon-tented Americans would heave the present government out of

We have been so active in the field, bowever, thet a number of our projects have come to light. Iran, Indonesia, South Vietnam, Greece, the Congo, Guatemala, Cuba—all have had their domestic politics secretly interfered with by the Central Intelligence Agency in ways that made headlines.

One of the CIA's few endearing traits is its penchant for making headlines. It is the world's most fully headlined secret agency. This is as it should be io an open society and while it is doubtless embarrassing to the CIA always to have its secrets turning up ou Page One, we are more than compensated for its ineptitude by the opportunity it affords us to know ourselves.

The difficulty may be that we prefer pot to know ourselves. How else can we explain these cries of shock that followed each fresh disclosure that the CIA has done it again? We bear them agaio about the Chile intervention. In Washington, wise meu who are on a first-name basis with Professor Kissinger are shocked - shocked! - to discover that the United States is overthrowing other peoples' gov-

> Where have these people been for the last 25 years? They always seem to be hearing it for the first time. President Ford's public approval of exported subversion-everybody else does it; why shouldn't we? he saidought to have had a bealthy result. It was a candid statement of a national policy in which most of us have tacitly concurred since the Stalin era.

Instead, the President is widely criticized. It is as if we don't want the President telling us the truth despite the demands for presidents who will tell us the

It is not a difficult paradox to explain. We have listened to our own publicity for so long that we believe it. Since 1945 our publicity agents have been telling us we are the good guys, the white hats, the idealists struggling for democracy and freedom along dark etreets swarming with the kind of thugs who overthrow other peoples governments and put their own ax men in charge.

This is a very pleasant picture to have of yourself. It is traumatic to have people as euthoritative as the President tell you it is the picture of Dorian Gray, and worse to have him pull the curtain eway and show you what you have really come to look like after all these years of preening your beauty in the sunlight but taking all those clandestine nocturnal strolls down the back alleys of world power.

Overthrowing other peoples governments is a habit of great imperial powers. Romans and Britain did it openly, as do the Russians today, and we differ from them only in insisting that our innocence has not been lost. that we are as pure today as we empire 30 years ago.

The government is sensitive ebout preserving our illusions. It does its best to keep the drearier realities from intruding upon us. Typically, the exposure of the Chilean subversion has resulted uot in any congressional demaod to do away with the policy, bot a move by the House Armed Services Committee to punish Rep. Harrington for telling us what we did down there.

If we are becoming the enemy we set out to thwart, the least Congress can do is punish anybody who threatens to let us know about it.

The Northern England Nightclub Boom

By Alan Tillier

MEDS (IHT) .- You can't see much of the so-called pre-election gloom as you drive into the Yorkshire town of Batley on a Saturday night. The town remains the heart of the amazing northern England nightclub scene, which blares on at a time when cabaret lights are going out elsewhere—and not only in England.

The pubs in the town center look dark and empty but that's because the action is elsewhere. Up a road the Batley Workingmen's Club is about to launch the evening's entertainment and singers and comics wait for the organist to warm up. The ladies sip their drinks in the well-appointed lounge and the men, Andy Capp style, play snooker in the Men Only Games room.

Club secretary Frederick Smith, 70, ex-painter and decorator, presides over 900 male and 230 female members who pay 2 mere 40 pence a year membership but who spend enough at the bars to pay for the club's new £72,000 premises. "We could have had a 500-seat concert hall for another £20,000 but that/II have to wait. The club has never been in debt in its 100 years," Mr. Smith said.

He pays his entertainers £12 to £25 a night and throws in an extra 25 if they go down well. He limits the number of female impersonators on the bill and keeps out blue comics. They have a good time at the Workingmen's Club where everyone knows everyone else. Old-style morality reigns, however, and Mr. Smith bemoans, Humor has changed. It's too mucky now. The other night a comic offered me a spare copy of his joke book. I told him straight I didn't want to carry that filth around."

Asking for the Moon

The other complaint is that performers "now ask for the moon." The old pound-a-night comics of the postwar era now want 250. But that's peanuts for the establishment down another road, the Batley Variety Club one of Europe's top night spots. The best, in Batley's view. Although Mr. Smith and his members cannot afford a night oot down there, they are proud of the Variety Club "for it's the only place that can pay for Shirley Bassey."

The Variety Club's big neon sign blinks on a parking lot full of buses, Jaguars and Rovers.

Burly veterans of the local Rugby League club, squeezed into dinner jackets, screen the crowds (the north of England can still be pretty tough on hard-drinking Saturday nights). People pay a entrance fee according to the star appearing—it was £2.50 for Johnny Mathia and Jeff Beavers, a train engineer turned floor manager, sees that everything runs smoothly among the 1,500 to 1,700 visitors ("Our bouncers never lose," Mr. Beavers says.) Shrimp and French fries flowed to the tables where the ladies were in strapless gowns and the men soberly suited except for a few with colored shirts and bow ties.

Some of the comics were a bit blue but this went down well with a large party of ladies from Bolton, a factory group celebrating last Christmas ("We couldn't do it at the time because of the threeday week," was the explanation they offered for the delayed night out).

The audience also included U.S. airmen from nearby bases and bus groups from all over, including London.

Killed by Silence

"Up here the audience kills a bad turn by silence, complete silence," said one northern show business columnist

Business is holding up very well generally and London agent Tommy Wallace has booked Frankie Leine around the northern clubs in November. He says: "The clubs pay top stars up to £25,000 a week. It's a very healthy business currently despite the state of the country. People want to enjoy themselves. The working man still wents his drink and to watch the girls."

James Dowd, editor of "Club Mirror," just back from a "working trip" to Las Vegas with a batch of northern chib owners, said without a blink of an eye: "Las Vegas runs a similar show to ours, although a bit more lavish."

His club newspaper figures that beer sales in all clubs in Britain

now run at £1 million per day. Most of it is being spent in the North for the South does not have clubs of Batley's size. Another estimate is that bottled beer alone is being consumed at the rate of £100 million a year. Never mind the whisky.

No wonder Dowd is now organizing the National Club Show, with clubs having stands, at Belle Vue, Manchester. Liverpool, with its 4,000 clubs, will be well represented.

Bingo Kings

So will Sheffield, the steel town, where the "genuine" Bayarian beerhouse built by Germans cannot compete with the excitement over at the Flesta Night Chib, which bingo kings Keith and Jim Lipthorpe have built into what they call "Europe's most luxurious nightclub"-they've got a wide stairway leading to the vast cabaret room, banks of lighted tables and Italian gold-leaf tiles on the wall.
"The lord mayor sits next to the dustman here," says the Fiesta's chief bouncer, Weishman Bill Jordan, who heads a team of ex-commandos. There are no Saturday-night football rowdies in the Fleste, where Sheffield couples spend around 27 on the average. Eleven hundred people is considered a quiet night. They can fit 1,500 in the big room twice a night and charge £5.50 a head for someone like Ella Frizgerald. "We have to clear £16,000 most weeks before we start making a profit," says Bob Bacon, who worked his way from barman to floor manager.

He added: "It's a different scene here to the old northern clubs where everyone knew each other. Here they come in groups of two, four and six." The big British TV comedians like Charlie Williams and Bernard Manning started in clubs such as the Fiesta.

Mr. Lipthorpe, of the Fiests, who opens a 2,500-seat club in Stockton shortly, says that with more clubs opening, performers are exploiting the tight supply of top entertainers "and have doubled their price over the past two years. You get British performers now asking £8,000 to £10,000 a week and you can double that for Americans. We cannot raise our cover charges to meet the new price of entertainers, some of whom are making a killing."

Saturday-night business at the Plesta seemed good enough, however, to keep a staff of 160 busy, while the 22-club chain run by the Balley Organization of South Shields has just added a new 2,000seat club at Stoke-on-Trent.

Belley spokesman Jack Ramsey says business has been affected by the general economic situation. "But it remains quite good and is certainly the one bright spot in an otherwise gloomy national Balley's, now Europe's largest club chain, started on Tyneside with a little place opened by two engineers. Now, says Ramsey, the chain supplies first-class cabaret (Johnny Ray is a Bailey's

Equal of the World

Top London booking agent Peter Prichard says: "These clubs are now equal to anything in the world. I mean Andy Williams and Victor Borge play Wakefield, Yorkshire."

The Wakefield Theater Club, run by former bingo-hall owner Steve Bartell, 32, has also had the Woody Herman and Stan Kenton bands, Tony Bennett, Sarah Vaughan and the Royal Philharmonic

"The Wakefield crowd loved the orchestra," Mr. Prichard said. "But the conductor told me afterwards that it was the first place they'd played where the audience handed up drinks to the musicians." The northerners still really prefer their homebred comics like

Bernard Manning, who start out with lines like: "I know we've all had a lot to drink, but let's try and keep it clean." It's the comics with their near-the-knuckle jokes about mothers-in-law and "queers" plus the northern urge to have a good time and spend that has built the base for the big American stars.

It's a plush, big-money world these days, but the fatrground and bingo tycoons know they have to give value for money. Unfortunately, the setup is not conducive to finding new talent and the singing policemen and ukulele-playing milkmen are confined more than ever to the cheaper club circuit.

Jimmy Connors and Chris Eyert.

PEOPLE: Evert-Connors Wedding Postponed?

The wedding of tennis stars Chris Evert and Jimmy Conners has been indefinitely postponed, the Berkshire Eagle reported in Pittsfield, Mass. The paper quoted an Evert-family source and said that the delay was "dus to the crush of an unyielding tennis schedule and a desire by both youngsters to slow down an onrushing wedding date," Miss Evert won the Wimbledon women's singles championship during the summer and Connors won both the U.S. Open and the Wimbledon men's singles championships. Neither Miss Evert, in Houston for a tennis tournament, nor her family in Florida could be reached for comment. In San Francisco, where Connors had competed over the weekend in a tourney, his mother, Gloria, said that her son was ill and could not come to the telephone. Asked about the report, Mrs. Connors said, "T haven't heard anything about it."

"My name is Edward, my father is a gentleman farmer and my mother does not work"-that is how an heir to the British throne tried to hide his identity while studying French in Toulouse, France, sources said. "Edward was in fact Prince Andrew, Queen Elizabeth's second son, who, as one of 15 pupils from Gordonstoun School in Scotland, spent three weeks in Toulouse. A spokesman at Buckingham Palace said that the 14-year-old prince had returned to England last weekend and was back in school
